

Mrs. Frasch Whitton Will Be Married to Count Constantini

Special Adviser of the Italian Government to Wed American Woman.

Mrs. F. Frasch Whitton, who has held a prominent place in society here and in Paris several years, informed a few friends yesterday that she will be married to Count Augustus Constantini, special adviser of the Italian Embassy in Washington. The wedding is to take place in New York in a few days.

Mrs. Frasch Whitton returned from France a week ago and went to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel where she has lived since in New York during the last two years. The Italian diplomatist got back from Europe Tuesday by the Majestic and went to the same hotel.

News of the approaching wedding became general when Mrs. Frasch Whitton and Count Constantini obtained their marriage license at the Municipal Building yesterday. At that time it was said that the ceremony would be performed in the Municipal Chapel by City Clerk Michael J. Cruise. The Count said yesterday the wedding would not take place there on Saturday.

Mrs. Frasch Whitton is a daughter of the late Herman Frasch of Cleveland, and Mrs. Frasch, who has since her husband's death lived with her daughter here and abroad. The late Mr. Frasch was a noted chemical engineer, and for many years was associated with the Standard Oil Company in Cleveland. Mrs. Frasch Whitton was first married to Mr. Henry Devereux Whitton of Cleveland, and New York. They were divorced in Paris last September. She has a Paris residence at 47 Avenue Hoche and a country place in Locust Valley, L. I., called Tulp Hill.

Count Constantini, who, in obtaining the license, gave his age as forty-seven and who is several years older than Mrs. Frasch Whitton, is a son of Count Emilio Constantini, who has since his father's death, with the opening of the world war he entered the Italian army with the rank of lieutenant. During part of the war he also served some time in Washington as member of the Italian mission. He returned last autumn with the Italian delegation to the conference on the limitation of armament, remaining as special adviser to the Italian Embassy. When the Italian Ambassador went home on leave early this summer Count Constantini accompanied him.

The Count is a widower. His first wife, who was an American woman, died in 1918, leaving a fortune. His home is in Florence, where he occupies a palazzo filled with beautiful furniture and objects of art. While in Washington previously he occupied the home of Commander and Mrs. Claude B. Mayo in Georgetown, where he entertained frequently.

London, Sept. 13.—

Whatever is the condition of the Serbians on their troubled borders, the king is in fine fettle. He proved it this morning when he arrived at Victoria station from Claridge's, where he has been stopping incognito, just as the express for the continent was getting signs to depart.

The King of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes leapt out of his motor and, wasting no time in farewells, made a dash for the train. He threw his hat back and struck a pretentious pose, while the porters unshook of his identity, howled their encouragement. His Majesty reached his carriage as the train was starting and looked back to smile his satisfaction. His servants, following with his luggage missed the train.

King Alexander is meeting the Queen in Paris, and planning to spend a few days there.

Paris, Sept. 13.—

Dispatches from Venice tell how Donald Sherwood, a reckless young American, risked his life to save a dog from drowning in a Venetian canal. The dog, a prize winner named Princess d'Or, an English bred French bulldog, was another dog who is visiting his sister, Mrs. Courtney Palmer, in her summer residence in Venice, was taking the dog in a gondola, attended by her own butler, and was about to give a dog in a smaller boat that was passing and with playful abandon plunged overboard and began swimming toward it.

But swimming proved a much harder task than it seemed, for the dog, who looks like aquatic animal, and she began to sink. Instantly Sherwood plunged overboard, shoes and all, and after a brave fight the two were rescued with ropes thrown from the gondolas.

MR. WIDENER'S REMBRANDT WAS ONCE REJECTED BY HIS FATHER

'Descent from the Cross,' for Which He Is Said to Have Paid $500,000, Recently Changed Hands for Approximately $45,000.

Investigation yesterday revealed the fact that Rembrandt's "Descent from the Cross," the gem of the three canvases bearing this title and probably this artist's greatest religious picture, and just added to the collection of Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia at a price reported to be in the neighborhood of $500,000, was rejected by noted American collectors previously, including Mr. Widener's father, P. A. B. Widener, and recently changed hands at approximately $45,000.

Passed over in 1920 by Benjamin Altman, J. P. Morgan, Henry C. Frick and the elder Widener because religious subjects and primitives were banned by the collector, it remained for the purchase of the latter to break the tradition and buy this picture.

Finding the 1908 American market cold to the proposition of acquiring this canvas, the P. Kleinberger galleries at 725 Fifth avenue, who were then owners of the picture, returned it to Paul where Frederick Gans, a noted collector of Rembrandt's work, had real worth, paid $80,000 francs for it. Upon his death in 1920 the Gans collection passed to K. W. Bachitz, from whom Mr. Widener purchased it in July of this year, being assisted by Dr. Bode and Dr. Wilhelm R. Valentiner, noted Rembrandt authorities. Thus in a short space of thirteen years the picture, which is the best of our collectors' last purchases as one of the most highly prized art treasures in this country.

Sold in Bankruptcy.

Sold as No. 293 in bankruptcy proceedings brought against Rembrandt in 1920, there is no record of its purchase and its subsequent ownership until it appears in the collection of the late Mr. Widener in England in 1924. In 1920 it passed into the collection of Col. J. A. Beaver of Lancaster, then to E. W. Parker of Skirwith Abbey, Cumberland. On July 2, 1920, it appeared in the auction rooms of Christie's in London, at which sale it was purchased by P. Kleinberger of this city, who paid $150,000 francs for it, approximately $45,000.

E. M. Sperling, vice-president of the Kleinberger Galleries, who made the purchase in 1920, speaking of the transaction yesterday, told some interesting details to a New York Herald reporter. It was catalogued as a Rembrandt at this sale, but he said, so many things were catalogued wrongly that this fact alone meant little or nothing to him. He first noticed the painting while the workmen were hanging the exhibition, and thought it was much covered with a coating of varnish, and that the figures were all but the lighter figures, he was impressed with the head of the Christ.

The third, painted in 1651, which in the opinion of Dr. Valentiner is the greatest of the three, duplicates at a hasty glance the second picture, though a closer study reveals the fact that the Virgin Mary is the only figure which escapes copied from the earlier canvas.

The first, a panel belonging to the celebrated Passion Series, was purchased by Prince Frederick Henry, Stadtholder of the Netherlands, who already owned its companion picture, "The Raising of the Cross," which is now in the Alte Pinakothek of Munich.

The second, painted on canvas a year later, 1652, is known the world over by reproductions as the "Descent from the Cross by Torchlight."
